

This map illustrates the geographical distribution of various Chinese dialects across China. Each point represents a specific dialect, labeled with its name and a number indicating a particular phonological feature or tone. The map shows a clear pattern of linguistic divergence from north to south, with distinct clusters of related dialects in different regions.